

Language courses

---

At your own pace and style

We offer a wide range of possibilities for you to find the one that best suits your pace and style of working.

Attendance-based courses of variable duration and intensity, bimodal courses which combine classes and independent learning for a more flexible learning experience, and virtual courses for maximum flexibility and independence, allowing you to learn whenever and wherever you are. Always, of course, with the support of one of our tutors.

Focus on communication

Our courses are designed to offer use of the language in real, everyday situations, and they are therefore eminently practical and involve maximum participation. The activities are communicational and interactive, and are centred on the needs of the students.

We work on the four basic language skills: speaking, listening, writing and reading.

Communication skills

Do you have a good level, but want to improve your written skills? Do you want to know how to speak in public and provide good arguments for your proposals? Do you have to write a conference paper or an academic article? We offer training in communication skills in English and Catalan.

European Standard

All our courses correspond to the levels established by the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages of the European Council's Education Committee.

These levels follow a clearly identified scale of progression. The aims and content are defined for each level, and you can consult them before you sign up for the course.

Qualified teaching staff

All our teachers are university graduates with broad teaching experience and specialist qualifications in language teaching.

Our teaching team is closely coordinated by the academic management group to ensure the continuing high quality of the services we offer.

Excellence

We evaluate all our courses regularly through the analysis of given objectives and student satisfaction. We use the results of these evaluations for the continual improvement of our academic activity.