Objectives and Contextualisation

This subject offers a historical and systematic picture of the main philosophical problems addressed by the critical theory developed mainly by the so-called Frankfurt School. To this end, we will study the main texts that have produced the three generations of philosophers and the current trends of the feminist critical theory.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES

1. Understanding the main problems and concepts used by critical theory.
2. To identify, analyze and explain some concepts and arguments.
3. To know the main theoretical approaches.
4. To be familiar with the main texts of the critical tradition.
5. To use the philosophical terminology appropriately
6. Developing the skills for the student's reasoning
7. To promote written and oral presentations of the acquired knowledge
8. To identify the conceptual, analytical and methodological potential offered by the critical theory
9. To establish a dialogue between the tradition of critical theory and other contemporary currents of social philosophy

Competences

- Analysing and summarising the main arguments of fundamental texts of philosophy in its various disciplines.

- Applying the knowledge of ethics to the moral problems of society, and assessing the implications about the human condition of changes in the world of contemporary techniques.
- Developing critical thinking and reasoning and communicating them effectively both in your own and other languages.
- Placing the most representative philosophical ideas and arguments of a period in their historical background and relating the most important authors of each period of any philosophical discipline.
- Recognising and interpreting topics and problems of philosophy in its various disciplines.
- Recognising the philosophical implications of the scientific knowledge.
- Respecting the diversity and plurality of ideas, people and situations.
- Students must be capable of applying their knowledge to their work or vocation in a professional way and they should have building arguments and problem resolution skills within their area of study.
- Students must be capable of collecting and interpreting relevant data (usually within their area of study) in order to make statements that reflect social, scientific or ethical relevant issues.
- Students must be capable of communicating information, ideas, problems and solutions to both specialised and non-specialised audiences.
- Students must develop the necessary learning skills to undertake further training with a high degree of autonomy.
- Students must have and understand knowledge of an area of study built on the basis of general secondary education, and while it relies on some advanced textbooks it also includes some aspects coming from the forefront of its field of study.
- Thinking in a critical and independent manner on the basis of the specific topics, debates and problems of philosophy, both historically and conceptually.

Learning Outcomes

1. Analysing historical cases about scientific facts.

Assessment

Evaluation:

Continuous evaluation consists in:

1. Two partial exams

Partial 1 (4 points)

Partial 2 (4 points)

2. To write an essay (2000 words) (2 points)

General information

- At the beginning of the course, the format to follow for the writing of the philosophical essay will be explained, and an expanded list of recommended readings will be provided.

- The dates for the written exams and the delivery of the remaining exercises are indicated in the course timeline. It will not be accepted any work out of the set dates. For more information, see the re-evaluation criteria.

Any change in the assessment or content dates will be announced in advance.

The students who do not present at least one of the two partial exams will not be evaluated at the end of the course, unless they contact with the person in charge of the subject with enough time in advance. In that case, the professor will find an alternative evaluation for the student.

Criteria for reevaluation

In order to have a final grade it is mandatory for the student to be evaluated both the partial and the essay.

Date of re-evaluation: to be determined.

WARNING - STUDENTS WHO WOULD LIKE TO BE SUBMITTED TO THE RE-EVALUATION MUST CONTACT BY EMAIL WITH THE SUBJECT PROFESSOR TWO WEEKS BEFORE OF THE DATA ESTABLISHED. PLEASE DO NOT FORGIVE TO EMAIL ME TO: Martha.Palacio@uab.cat
