Objectives and Contextualisation

Over last few decades as economy has become more oriented toward knowledge-based work and dominated by the service sector, organizations have recognized that people are their major source of competitive advantage and their key resource. As a result, human resource management (HRM) has taken on a more strategic role in organizations. Decisions made about whom to hire, what training to give them, how to reward them, and so on have become increasingly important. More and more these decisions are made not only by the HR department and managers but also by individual employees and team members. Thus the main goal of this course is to enable students as future employees and future managers to understand their responsibilities regarding HRM. Additionally, we will consider HR policies, with emphasis in ethical behavior and non-discriminatory gender policies. We will analyze the wage gender gap, ceiling glass effects, and other problems related to recruiting, dismissals and career concerns.
